The Bloody Premise. Blood Bowl: Death Zone is a side game in the Blood Bowl tabletop universe, in which two teams led by a star Blood Bowl player do battle in a four-on-four football game. The game doesn't really have anything resembling a story. In fact, when the game first loads up, it kind of just plops you into the main menu, and you stumble your way around from there.

Yet despite sharing so many assets, there's something weirdly inferior to the look of Death Zone. There's only one type of Touchdown animation, with the exact same crowd shots. In a way, Death Zone almost looks like a mobile version of Blood Bowl. And if it were a mobile game, it would probably seem less offensive for it.

As we see it, Death Zone Season One pretty much completes the core Blood Bowl experience, especially for tournament play (not counting a couple of minor omissions – don't worry, long-time coaches, Wizards will be back!). The optional league rules in Season Two are intended to bring a bit more detail and narrative to games.

In mountaineering, the death zone refers to altitudes above a certain point where the pressure of oxygen is insufficient to sustain human life for an extended time span. This point is generally tagged as 8,000 m (26,000 ft, less than 356 millibars of atmospheric pressure). The concept was first conceived in 1953 by Edouard Wyss-Dunant, a Swiss doctor, who called it the lethal zone.
